Demon Fighting Teens

Posted by crystalcross - 07 Apr 2012 21:15

Those of you who know me on here for some time now, likely know that I tend to be a very level headed person. I very seldom get upset about things, and I try to keep an open mind on most subjects.

But just the other day I saw an expose on ABC news which completely blew me away. It was wrong on so many levels in my opinion.

The story was about a group of teen girls who had recently graduated from a Priest's school of exorcism. These girls were going out and casting out demons in people. And the priest was very much behind them. They use many of the buzz words you hear on TV, and are now hoping for negotiations to get a TV show of their own.

To really top things off, they were charging these individuals exorbitant amounts of money to help rid them of these demons. And sometimes requiring multiple sessions.

Please watch this video and judge for yourself.

abcnews.go.com/GMA/video/teen-exorcists-...ight-demons-16077490

Be forewarned, this video may stir up some strong emotions. I know it did in me. I'm open to a great many things, but some things just have the potential of making the entire paranormal community look like crackpots. I was completely outraged when I saw this article. Great work on ABC's part, and I really have to applaud them for bringing such an article in as national news.

==========

Re: Demon Fighting Teens

Posted by monamcdermott - 09 Apr 2012 01:39

Why hasn't the religious community stepped forward to stop these people? It looks fabricated. To me, rather than focusing on the paranormal community, why not focus on the church sect? Focus the negativity on them, for the fabrication and execution (the follow through) on the girls' religious actions. Ask yourselves this: would any Catholic Church allow women/girls as priests? Would the Catholic Church allow any publicity on their behalf on such dangerous activities? (The exercism). To my knowledge the Church goes through extensive research on the background before allowing any such action for an exercism. That to acknowledge the exorcism is for the Church to give support, which I don't believe that it likes to do that!

Hopefully you can see my point in that, I agree, these girls and the "so-called" priest are a joke. I am level headed too, open minded individual; yet actions like this really piss me off. It can look bad for the paranormal, but I think if the paranormal community rallies around and focuses on the actions of their "religon" that the negativity can then be pointed into the direction of the false-ones and their lies.

Now I can step off my high-horse thunk..dammit I missed the step!! jk lol.

==========