Little Shop Photo
Posted by Steven Matrix - 12 Apr 2012 00:52

_____

So folks, CC was heading up a recent investigation in Melbourne and we caught this on camera.

==========

Re: Little Shop Photo
Posted by Steven Matrix - 12 Apr 2012 23:37

_____

Tresses Of Nephthys wrote:

Ok I did think there was something weird about this picture. The dots seemed too patterned. Not really your typical "orb" pic for sure. Thought maybe it was those meshy Christmas lights or beads or something. I figured you'd have an explanation. Thank you for posting it. It's good to learn from all of these types of photos.

Do I act like an orb photographer to you??? Lol. That's the grid that CC set up Tress. Putting up the fakes as well as the real will be a good thing.

==========

Re: Little Shop Photo
Posted by crystalcross - 12 Apr 2012 23:46

_____

Ok, every time I see this topic on the list of forum topics on the left I instantly think "Feeeeeeeed me, Seymore! Feeeeeed me!"

Anyway, that having been said. I would want to use extreme caution going down this road. I think its so easy for it to become a "Trick the Investigator" type of thing. Although I do like the idea of a library of comparative photos. Somewhat of a baseline. Just like police have mug-shots, it would be great for investigators to have comparison photos. Great idea!

==========

Re: Little Shop Photo
Posted by Tresses Of Nephthys - 13 Apr 2012 00:02

_____

Steven Matrix wrote:

Tresses Of Nephthys wrote:

Ok I did think there was something weird about this picture. The dots seemed too patterned. Not really your typical "orb" pic for sure. Thought maybe it was those meshy Christmas lights or beads or something. I figured you'd have an explanation. Thank you for posting it. It's good to learn from all of these types of photos.

Do I act like an orb photographer to you??? Lol. That's the grid that CC set up Tress. Putting up the fakes as well as the real will be a good thing.

Haha noooo. Actually the first thought was that you were putting up that picture that you were talking about, but then I thought, no he said that was one giant orb. Like I said, I knew there was something odd about this picture, but I've never seen a light grid so I didn't know what to make of it.

==========

Re: Little Shop Photo

Posted by Steven Matrix - 13 Apr 2012 00:09

_____

crystalcross wrote:

Ok, every time I see this topic on the list of forum topics on the left I instantly think "Feeeeeeeed me, Seymore! Feeeeeed me!"

Anyway, that having been said. I would want to use extreme caution going down this road. I think its so easy for it to become a "Trick the Investigator" type of thing. Although I do like the idea of a library of comparative photos. Somewhat of a baseline. Just like police have mug-shots, it would be great for investigators to have comparison photos. Great idea!

We would never try to trick the investigators CC. When I posted the pic at first, I let everyone take a look at it and explained a little bit about it. I did this to see what folks would say; no type of tricking involved. Then I explained how we got the effect. If we keep it honest without bringing any false claims, I think it'll help educate people.

Sometimes people are too quick to see a photo as paranormal. That's where the technical knowledge comes in. But I would rather people look at it and try to process what they see rather than for me to tell them up front.

I will put this photo in a "photos of the non paranormal kind" album as I think it would be a great addition and I encourage all of you to contribute your best non paranormal pics as well.

==========