I have a Question about Orbs.
Posted by Keith - 06 Oct 2011 23:10

_____

-

==========

Re: I have a Question about Orbs.
Posted by TressesOfNephthys - 07 Oct 2011 16:04

_____

Well as far as an intuitive getting a reading from someone else, there is such a thing as being too close to the situation. I have a hard time reading myself and others in my family. Maybe I am reading them, just in a completely different way. Anyway, psychic or not, I wouldn't mind getting a reading done. There's always going to be another perspective that could help us add to the perspective we have of ourselves.

==========

Re: I have a Question about Orbs.
Posted by LadyFlash - 07 Oct 2011 16:35

_____

I have always been told that an intuitive can read almost anyone, except themselves or family. For some reason they are too close to allow for accurate reading. I guess it would be easier to read into or misinterpret what you are picking up on due to close knowledge of that person. You have to be able to detach on one level and it's more difficult when you yourself or family is involved.

==========

Re: I have a Question about Orbs.
Posted by amoonwolfe - 08 Oct 2011 17:36

_____

I agree completely. I must say that when I break down and seek outside advice/a reading, I have found tons of total fakes over the last 45 years. It is difficult to sit there and listen to someone tell you a pack of outright lies and as a result, I usually take a "witness" along when I go for a reading. The most accurate reader I ever encountered actually offered to mentor me and did so for many years. May you find just such a trusted and accurate individual. Best of luck on your path.

==========

Re: I have a Question about Orbs.
Posted by amoonwolfe - 08 Oct 2011 17:40

_____

A multi-colored orb, sunch as the one you describe is usually a moisture droplet refracting light as a prism would. Congratulations on a nice experience.

==========

Re: I have a Question about Orbs.
Posted by RedFyre - 09 Oct 2011 18:37

_____

I'm new here - so I'm not sure if this is the right place, but saying that - there is a finite amount of space on a server no, or you have to pay more. I've been looking at pics, and time and time again people post pics of orbs.. most aren't paranormal.. it's frustrating and a waste of time, why do people still believe in them?

==========

Re: I have a Question about Orbs.
Posted by LadyFlash - 09 Oct 2011 18:49

_____

I think people still believe in orbs, because there is no other explanation for some things. I have seen some things that were pegged as orbs that were clearly dust particles or insects. However I HAVE seen seen video footage of what could only be described as orbs of light. Could there be a logical explanation for them? Possibly, but I am not sure what that would be. It's like the term UFO. Any object flying in the air can be a UFO if you don't know what it is.

==========

Re: I have a Question about Orbs.
Posted by RedFyre - 09 Oct 2011 18:57

_____

Very true.. I've seen orbs that have moved in unnatural ways with intent..those I get.. but not the ones that show up willy nilly.. I used to get so excited - but para experts I know push off most as natural phenomena that gets caught..

I wish there was a disclaimer and a rule that you can't do a close up without the original...

thanks for the post!

Cheers!

==========

Re: I have a Question about Orbs.
Posted by LadyFlash - 09 Oct 2011 19:25

_____

It's possible that they are excited and caught up in the moment. Or just don't know what they are looking at. Hard to tell. I try to look at everything from a logical standpoint. Anything I can't put a definitive (sorry, coding background verbage there) explanation on, is unexplained. It's interesting to figure out though. One way or the other.

==========

Re: I have a Question about Orbs.

Posted by Keith - 09 Oct 2011 23:27

_____

-

==========