Could use your intuitive impressions

Hi guys, I'm just putting these pics out there to see if there's anything anyone can pick up. This is the property across the street from me, which has a rather sad story attached to it which I will pass on later on. I have noticed this week something odd--even after five years of living across the street and peering upon this land every day, I have never noticed this clearing where clearly there was supposed to be a driveway. The stones of the stone wall even curve in to make what I would call a flower bed, which is also something I've never noticed. I understand it's winter and the underbrush is dead, but I still practically gasped this morning taking out my trash because this gap in the stone wall is directly across from the end of my driveway. If there had been a driveway there it would almost look like a continuation of my driveway. It seemed to be inviting me to walk up. So I snapped some pictures.

I didn't pick up on the boy or the other man that seems to be negative but i'm wondering if the number of branches laying around the tree is a sign of three..... The tree also leans towards two and away from the other one. Maybe this has significants.just a thought.

Speaking of spirit attachments, it made me think of the one time I did have a spirit attachment. And it's one of those things where the thought had popped into my head before but now that I've thought about it a little more I'm seeing some patterns. I believe that spirits in need of help may seek a specific person out if a familiar pattern is sensed. For me, from age 16-19 I had the spirit of a boy I should have graduated with attached to me. His name was John Horan. He was 17 years old when he died in a car accident. Eventually it came to light that his father was one of the last doctors that treated my grandmother before she died (she was very terminal with breast cancer) years before I was even born. I never figured out exactly why but once that connection was made I felt him lift off of me and finally cross over. Now I have another Jon H who died in a car accident around the same age who is seeking my help. Hopefully my first John H can help me. over the course of using rods you will learn spirit attachment and why it occurs

Well, the flowers are starting to grow, but that's all I really know more than what I already have learned. Maybe once I get around to drowning myself in tick repellent I can get myself on to the property again. I've already been bitten twice in the span of a month, and that was just from being out on the lawn, never mind that the property across the street looks like a jungle lol.
