orb and scratches
Posted by ghostman50 - 01 Mar 2012 20:25

_____

this pic was taken at montrose cematary while investagting a group of people stopped by and asked if they could take a pic with one of our investagtors if you look at the young man that has his hand up you will dee what im talking about if you zoom in it takes form of a face 2nd pic shows one of our investagators that got scratched.

==========

Re: orb and scratches
Posted by crystalcross - 02 Mar 2012 21:43

_____

Yeah I know how that is. Sometimes its difficult to plan every photo. Plus the external flash takes a good deal of setup time. Not something that we have a luxury of in every investigation.

==========

Re: orb and scratches
Posted by BHPI Josh - 02 Mar 2012 22:27

_____

Want to touch on a couple things here because it seems I'm getting some sort of crappy reputation here. First off, I'm offering my opinion based on what I've experienced. I never claim it to be fact, simply an opinion. Secondly, I've never said anything about not believing personal experiences. I simply state they are just that, experiences and I don't consider them proof unless they can be documented thoroughly. BHPI members, myself included, have had many of these types of experiences that cannot be documented. We will explain them to clients and then proceed to let them know we cannot document it and do not consider it proof. We do trust our investigators and I've never called someones personal experiences fake or ever wanted to imply that.

==========

Re: orb and scratches
Posted by Peek-A-Boo - 02 Mar 2012 22:37

_____

as far as my post goes, it was a general statement directed at no specific person.

==========

Re: orb and scratches
Posted by kctkd - 02 Mar 2012 22:38

_____

I just to step in and agree with your stance on saying that it not or cannot provide it as evedince. As you can see it is very opinionated. I write off orbs as nothing but dust unless it is in conjunction with a personal experience, but I have never called it evidence either. I think you and BHPI have and are doing a great job and enjoyef watching you do your live investigations. I hope you enjoy MCPRS do our first live investigation tonight.

==========

Re: orb and scratches

Posted by ghostman50 - 02 Mar 2012 22:46

_____

yes your right about one thing bc this was in conjuction with many personal experiences with this case in general

==========