ok guys i took some advice from a viewer took these pic s in my home with out a flash there are no windows behind me or in front of me could be a reflection off of something but its just odd that i take three pics one nothing there other two something there its almost like the ones i posted from lastnight when using a flash i just cant ezplain it during this time myself and one of my team members were working with k2 and doing some evps now keep in mine the pics k2 and this evp were done at the same time so im using this to back up a claim of possible paranormal activity.

its ok too say orbs wont hold it against ya steven lol look im very skeptical of orbs to be honest with ya im just stating its kinda weird sometimes when you take a pic something might be there then you take another then its something you cant ezplain when this house has alot of history to it its good that everyone has there own oppion and i respect that there was one night im sitting in bed watching tv then out of nowhere you get slapped accross the mouth lol thats not normal cant blame the orbs on that one lol but these are the kinds of things i deal with in this home although its been a good while since that happen something i wont forget if you can listen to the evp i put up tell me what ya think

You may be able to catch quite a bit on camera. Sounds like a paranormal candy store dude. Though you may want to ask them to please not slap you; that you aren't there to cause them any problems.

I found photo number 2 interesting as well, number three does look like a lens/light refraction issue.

I'd love to see more (when you get them) of the non-flash photos, as they give validity to the non-light refraction and light omitting of the energy.. great photo!
