I am not really seeing anything in the window and when I zoom in it gets to pix-elated. My guess it might be a distortion of the screen on the older style storm window. Just because I do not see anything doesn't mean nothing is there. I hope this helps!!

You're talking about the second story window, right? Not the attic? I do see something with a slightly humanoid shape, but it could just be matrixing.

Yes second floor window, don't know if you can tell, the attic is just a vent, not a window. I the shape is what they are talking about, I also think it is just matrixing of the noise.

Could be matrixing. I can barely make it out just to the right side in the back ground. Looks like a jacket hanging on a door or rack. I blends in almost with the curtain. Very hard to see.

The window looks down a hallway at the top of a staircase, it is low to the floor, it you stand in front of it, your head is just above the top of window. There is no coat or anywhere in the hallway that one can be hung. I think it is just matrixing personally. I thank everyone for you thoughts on this.
