Can someone please give me an opinion of this photo that I captured at the Battlefield of Gettysburg? I believe that I captured this at Devil's Den. I have absolutely not altered anything in the photograph whatsoever. What do you think?

Hmm...can you tell a little more about the pic? Was it taken looking down a hall? I see the wheel like thing on the wall but I am not sure about what the tall/long thing to the right of it is.

Bridget,

I know the site, I lived in the area for 2 years. So I think I have an idea of how you took the image and at what angle. Here is my take on what you've captured, and mind you its a personal educated opinion nothing else.

First I do fully trust its an unaltered photo, I can tell that from the header information. However, I'm not seeing much paranormal in the picture. I've enhanced the brightness and labeled some areas.

Then directly beside that is a protruding rock on the side of that wall.

In the recessed area towards the back are stone wall features and some rocks on the ground.

To the left you'll see marked in purple that you've captured a fairly sizable rat. Quite disgusting but not paranormal.

The only thing I really find of interest is those bright dots in the center. I circled them in orange. Possibly reflective materials on the ground, hard to tell. They're not dust orbs. Can't really tell what they are.

Ok, I just wanted a take on this. However, I'm also kind of questionable about the protruding rock that you marked. If you unmark, I believe that you can see half of a face with an eye, part of the nose, and part of the lips. Is that me, or is it just matrixing?

Oh! Now I get what you're saying about the rat! That does sort of look like a rat! Thanks you for your opinion! I really appreciate it! I just wanted to see how other people interpreted this picture and what I could get from it! (; Thanks so much!

No, this was not taken in a hall. This was taken outside in broad daylight.
