Sorry folks, still trying to learn to properly post on this site. This isn't a ghostly photo; it's a general photo that my wife wanted me to take while in Oaklawn Cemetery today.

As I said in another post, this place has been good training for us to learn how to be more sensitive to the spiritual influences around us. The photos we take are a result of those influences.

That's quite alright Steve. It all relates, actually I think you have a gift for capturing the spirit in the places where we put our loved ones to rest. It captures a quiet beauty on what most people tend to fear. I think it fits perfectly with this site.
