That looks like it may be some sort of urn, vase or one of those water decanters. It looks too smooth to be a face. I do tend to think that this is matrixing at work.

If you look center right of this pic there is a similar shape going on but more blurry. Probably safe to say there's something in the house making those shapes, not necessarily the ghosties.

Also, I'm a little confused by the perspective of this photo. There seems to be some metal bars, a window pane behind it that's red and another window pane behind that that's black...? Maybe some weird reflection going on here too. Hard to tell where that "face" is, in front of the glass or behind. There is a curtain visible in the background, but like I said, everything sort of looks like a reflection of a reflection.
