Ghosts and Haunts Forum - Ghosts and Haunts

Generated: 1 November, 2025, 13:33

Thoughts of death some may find of interest.  Posted by Keith - 06 Oct 2011 13:47
Penned on 1-20-2011
This is a poem that I wrote to help a dying friend understand the reason we live and die. I hope this is not inappropriate here but I find many people think of death is the end where I know it is really the beginning.
From the thoughts of a mangled mind
Death:
The definitive sum?
Taken away upon a breeze
Sparkling dew from a deep freeze
Watching vestiges drift and disappear
Nothing left, not as much as a tear
As the Earth becomes our new home
Words left behind are found within the tome
Long awaited for the day that was long over-due
Tears lost my friend were for you

Ghosts and Haunts Forum - Ghosts and Haunts

Generated: 1 November, 2025, 13:33 Once stepping upon the sands of eternity Words once left are for perpetuity Many searches are yet to come Left for not the totality but for the sum Let those who live on this day Know that death is without tempered dismay Lose not a moment of lingering time For tears are but a moments mime Know this my friend Within this poem I too have left my précis As to death, my thesis Ashes to ashes... Dust to dust My words, my insight, my truth is given you in trust Keith